VoiceAmerica Launches New Show on Optimal Health

VoiceAmerica Health and Wellness Channel's (San Francisco, CA) new weekly radio program, "The Cutting Edge of Health and Wellness Today," has a very specific goal—to show people how to reclaim and maintain optimal health.

Hosted by veteran experts in both standard and holistic/integrative medicine, Neil Nathan, MD and Jacob Teitelbaum, MD, the weekly show is a place to receive accurate, rather than erroneous information, according to Nathan, a practitioner at Gordon Medical Associates (Santa Rosa, CA) and a founding diplomate of the American Board of Holistic and Integrative Medicine.

"We want this program to be the premier destination for consumers and medical practitioners to receive in-depth, accurate information about effective treatments currently available in medicine," said Dr. Nathan.

Dr. Teitelbaum, director of the Practitioners Alliance Network (PAN), who is often featured on Good Morning America, CNN and the Dr. Oz Show, is also a lead author of four studies on effective treatment for fibromyalgia, chronic fatigue syndrome and the treatment of autism using NAET.

"We also intend to explore the controversies surrounding the field with a level of clarity that's generally not available anywhere else," said Dr. Teitelbaum. "We want this site to become the most trusted source on the risks and benefits of both standard and alternative treatments and diagnoses."

Future subjects on the show will include effective treatment for Lyme disease, mold toxicity, chronic pain, thyroid and adrenal problems, environmental toxicity, dementia and Alzheimer's disease, sleep problems, autism and intestinal health.
